

Training and upskilling ranked among the top priorities for employers in 2025, but turning that priority into action is where organisations create real advantage.

The Training Strategy Gap

The Training Strategy Gap

91% of Irish employers say training is a priority.

But for many organisations, those plans still haven't turned into action.

In the FRS Recruitment Employment Insights Report 2025, employers across Ireland highlighted three key priorities for the years ahead:

- Retaining staff
- Finding talent
- Upskilling employees

Yet despite strong intentions, many organisations are struggling to implement structured training programmes, creating a training strategy gap. And closing that gap matters.

Organisations that invest in training see:

- stronger employee retention

- improved compliance and safety
- more productive teams

If training is part of your 2026 workforce strategy, now is the ideal time to put those plans into action. FRS Training helps organisations build safer, more capable teams through targeted workplace training.
